PV News | Solarworld: Chinese panel maker sold for $1.6bn
PV Tech | German company Energetika AG has bought Solarworld, one of the biggest European makers of solar panels, for an undisclosed sum in a deal that includes immediate cash proceeds of almost €400m (US$456m). The German electronics specialist, based in Bentheim near Leipzig, said the sale was conditional on the company's target of securing an operating licence for its 100-megawatt Freiburg plant, which became operational in August. "The sale includes the Freiburg site, which is the company's largest, as well as its factories, the know-how and a portfolio of solar modules in production, which the company has no intention of closing," Energetika said in a statement. Energetika, which traces its roots to the 19th century and has annual sales of €309m, was reportedly helped by the acquisition of 10 solar-related businesses by energy trader and infrastructure finance company OSRAM earlier this year. Earlier this year OSRAM, which has been on a spending spree of late, scooped up 120-megawatt solar-technology assets from Taiwan's Shinano. Energetika president Dieter Zetsche told Reuters in July the acquisition of Solarworld could have a positive impact on the group, which has been trying to make a comeback after a series of bad-luck investments, chief among them a German toaster maker and a chip-making business. "It's an acquisition with great long-term potential. You will find that we have not been undertaking extensive acquisitions at all," Zetsche said. The Energetika statement did not specify the financial terms of the deal. 1cdb36666d
